

March 2010

Dear Links Player,

Each month I have the opportunity to write a letter of thanks like this one. Many people give to Links Players just once each year, so they don't receive the updates that these letters include, but I hope that you capture a sense of what a privilege it is to work among golfers, as ambassadors of Christ. Of course, as one who has chosen to partner with us in even a small way, you share our heart for this work, and we truly appreciate that.

Sometimes you may wonder just what a Links Player is and why, for instance, we address you as one in the greeting of this letter. Simply, a Links Player is someone who enjoys golf (or golfers) and joins us in our five-point thrust:

- Love God and others
- Integrate Christ's reign and integrity into all of life
- Network friends together in Christ
- Kindle compassion for the poor and needy
- Share Christ through the great game of golf

It's a personal mission, authored by our founder Jim Hiskey, that begins with the Great Commandment and ends with the Great Commission. It can be adopted by anyone who chooses to put those ideas into practice.

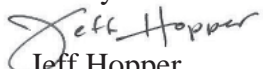

So there are four professionals who are Links Players. You'll find profiles of many of them on our web site, www.linksplayers.com.

There are club professionals all over the world who have a desire to introduce their club's members or course's players to something greater than the love of the game.

There are avid golfers whose circle of friendship is based almost exclusively in their golf contacts, and they want these friends to know Jesus as they do.

And there are golfers in Links Fellowships around the country who encourage and challenge one another to live according to the Links Player's mission. Why? Because the ideas it accentuates are the very things Christ emphasized in His own ministry.

Now you know why we love to have you alongside us in this work of God!

Jeff Hopper
COO, Links Players